

at the Center for Research Libraries

The importance of government records and documents to scholars in any historical, political or social inquiry cannot be overstated. The archiving and preservation of such records is a primary responsibility of governments.

Providing access to this information is a continuing challenge to libraries and archives. The following information describes some of the microform and reprint sets of documentary material that are available through the Center for Research Libraries. These sets deal with the study of Asia and reflect the activities of the governing body for a country or province. Each entry lists information about a guide to the collection if one exists. The OCLC number is included in the entry in parentheses to facilitate requesting the material through interlibrary loan. This listing is not intended to be complete, but rather to introduce interested scholars to CRL's collections. For a more detailed listing, visit <http://www.crl.uchicago.edu/info/handbook/hdbook.htm>
