• TTC is the oldest theological college in Singapore and began classes in 1948 in English. Four years later it started classes in Chinese. Today, both English and Chinese courses are taught by 22 full-time faculty members.

• We believe that a good theological education provides a particular way of looking at the world. It is not only about acquiring practical skills but also understanding the rationale behind them. It is about developing a holistic vision of reality that undergirds practice.

• By combining academic rigour with a commitment to spiritual formation for ministry, the college seeks to inculcate a deep appreciation of the richness of Christian tradition and a deeper grounding in both Scripture and Theology.

• TTC offers three Basic degree and four Advanced degree programmes. We also encourage lay people who are not called to full time ministry to study theology to help build up the church.

• Most of our students are from Singapore while one-third comes from the region and beyond. Students from many denominations and church traditions make the TTC community a diverse but blessed Christian family.

• We have one of the largest theological libraries in Asia, with a wide collection of the latest journals and periodicals, which pastors and church workers use regularly.

• Today, our alumni are serving as pastors, church workers, missionaries and seminary teachers but many also remain in their occupations and professions to serve God in the public square.

• TTC also works closely with the National Council of Churches in Singapore and the Bible Society of Singapore. One new project is the formation of ETHOS Institute for Public Christianity, a think tank to assist the church in its witness in society.
